Road building programme gets green light by stealth

Jan Goodey | 5th October 2012

Between 1992 and 1997 opposition to the government's road building scheme led to massive protests, such as here at the site of the Newbury Bypass. Photo: Antonio Olmos

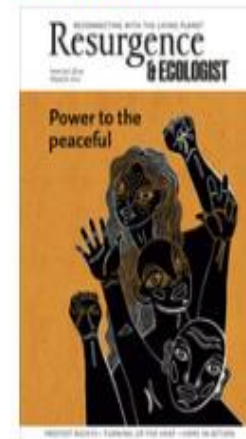

With a government seemingly intent on pushing through the latest road-building programme via its localism agenda campaigners are readying themselves for combined resistance using legal experts, alliance groupings and direct action

The 'first and worst' of the current tranche of new roads is the £120m Bexhill Bypass set
